Child porn case moves jurors to tears

By KATHARHYNN HEIDELBERG
MONTROSE DAILY PRESS SENIOR WRITER

Explicit images and videos presented as evidence in Travis Baca's exploitation trial visibly shook jurors Tuesday.

One juror's reaction was strong enough that she was released from duty.

Baca is charged with 29 counts of sexual exploitation of children, but says he was not aware that his phone and laptop contained explicit material.

A juror was seen looking away as the first few exhibits were presented. While the reaction was understandable, jurors have to consider all evidence, District Judge Mary Deganhart said, thanking the juror for her service. An alternate will take her place when it comes time to deliberate.

The prosecution showed a sample of the 201 photos and 70 videos said to have been retrieved from Baca's phone and laptop, rather than all images and video.

Deganhart told the jury the defense and prosecution had stipulated to showing a sampling.

While the remaining people seated in the jury box appeared to keep their eyes on the display screen, they continued to show signs of distress.

During an afternoon break, outside of the jury's presence, public defender Patrick Crane shared statements, including "That's something you don't see every day." He also referred to apparent statements about appropriate penalties for whomever was responsible for the images, "should be in jail for life."

Deputy District Attorney Seth Ryan agreed to show clips of fewer than 10 seconds. Crane argued that not even 10 seconds were necessary, since he had stipulated the material shows undamaged children in sexual situations.

Earlier, as each exhibit was offered to the jury, Crane objected because of the stipulation and on constitutional grounds. Co-counsel Valerie Cole noted that a number of jurors were in tears, and others still were visibly upset, even though all kept watching.

Deganhart overruled the objections, saying Ryan has the right to present evidence.

"I'm still struck by the balance of undue prejudice with the People's right to present their case," she said. Proving that the defendant acted "knowingly" is a critical element, and a sample of images and videos is appropriate to that end, Deganhart said.

Cool river

Where was the coolest place in Montrose Tuesday afternoon when the temperature soared to 96 degrees? In the Uncompahgre River, of course. Kayakers in Riverbottom Park reported the water temperature "very cold." Highs in the mid-90s are expected into next week, according to the U.S. Weather Service. (Paul Wahl/Montrose Daily Press)

Norwood man dies during hike

FROM STAFF REPORTS

A Norwood man collapsed and died while hiking with a friend near Telluride late Sunday morning, the San Miguel County Sheriff's Office reported in a news release.

Long-time San Miguel County employee Richard Dennison, 58, was hiking with his friend in the Woods Lake area down valley from Telluride. The friend told sheriff's deputies that both noted being fatigued about half way into their hike and took a couple of breaks before continuing.

At one point the two thought they might be off course, so the friend advised Dennison to stay put, and he went up a bit to check the trail.

When he returned just a few minutes later, he saw Dennison lying on the ground unresponsive, not breathing regularly, and with fixed pupils.

The friend immediately began CPR and then activated 911 at 11:31 a.m. He was also able to yell to hikers he heard in the distance who responded and assisted with CPR until sheriff's deputies, emergency medical services and fire department members arrived, hiked up and reached the patient about 30 minutes

Junk of the Unc. Race features handmade floating contraptions

FROM STAFF REPORTS

As Colorado temperatures reach into the high 90s and beyond, everyone from toddlers to retirees can take refuge from the heat at the coolest place on the Western Slope this Saturday – the Ridgway RiverFest.

Festival-goers will be treated to fun 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the cool waters of the Uncompahgre River and on the river bank under canopies in Rollans Park, northeast of the bridge off Highway 62.

For the ninth-annual festival, the river races are expected again to be the highlight. Watching or participating in the easy-going races are options.

original, custom-made awards by local artists, the inflatables, hard kayaks and standup paddle board races focus more on the enjoyment of river sports rather than on competitiveness.

The Junk of the Unc. Race, on the other hand, attracts racers who are serious about proving that their homemade water-crafts are the most buoyant.

Other highlights this year include live music by New Orleans blues guitarist and vocalist Kipori "Baby Wolf"

Woods 3-6 p.m., the Yogini Circus performing and training young audience members noon to 1:30 p.m., a cultural presentation by Ute historian Roland McCook and face-painting and a watershed education game with popsicle prizes for the kids.

RiverFest also includes a silent auction with great deals on river recreation and apparel plus outdoor adventures with local guides, books about the local area, restaurant certificates and a variety of keepsakes and gifts.

Locally brewed beers from Colorado Boy and Two Rascals breweries will be served plus energetically crafted margaritas by "Glenda the Blenda" cocktail-blending bicycle. Plus, Melry's, 99 Thai Food and the Backstreet Bistro will provide a selection of festival food.

The annual river festival is organized by the Uncompahgre Watershed Partnership, a Ouray County non-profit focused on protection and restoration of the Upper Uncompahgre River Watershed.

The partnership's project include mine remediation, environmental restoration, water monitoring and various community outreach events.

Nearly two dozen people responded from multiple agencies including sheriff's deputies, search and rescue personnel, fire and EMS personnel of the Telluride Fire Protection District, as well as the hikers.

Telluride Fire Deputy Chief John Cheroskee was one of the first responders on scene. "You could tell we've been working together for years. I just wish we had a better outcome."

Sheriff Bill Masters said that as a fellow county employee, this hit home. "On behalf of all San Miguel County employees, we are all saddened by this loss and extend our condolences to Mr. Dennison's family."
